

FUNDING OPPORTUNITY COMPETITION

A Call by the Community Collaboratory for Co-Creation

DEADLINE

15th
May 2023

Do your communities have a challenge or problem and want to work with nurses and engineers to solve it?

The Community Collaboratory for Co-Creation (Penn4C) is excited to announce a new competition designed to support community-based projects. This competition is open to all communities that identify a problem and want to partner with nurses and engineers to co-create solutions. If your idea is selected, we will pair you with nurses and engineers. Nurses know how to keep people and communities healthy. Engineers solve problems by creating things that help people improve their lives.

Funding will be provided to both your organization and the nursing and engineering teams to work on a year-long project to help come up with creative solutions to your problem and improve the lives of individuals in your communities.

To apply, simply submit a one-page description outlining your project idea and what you hope to achieve.

To learn more about this project and to apply, please email us at: info@penn4c.org
Due date: May 15, 2023

Community Collaboratory for Co-Creation
Designing Technology for Social Justice & Health

Website

www.penn4c.org

More Information : info@penn4c.org